

My 4 Must see in Ireland list

I decided to show five sightseeing everyone must see when visiting Ireland. These five is my top ones. Most of them I saw with my Boyfriend, because we had a car. During the semester we couldn't really go anywhere. We had close deadlines and the public transport was too expensive. Unfortunately, we had to spare money for the living – which is more expensive in than in Hungary. But! As I've already written about it, we had some fieldtrips. I saw the famous Cliffs of Moher thanks to the college. It was a welcome trip for the new students.

1. Cliffs of Moher

Unfortunately, it was cold and foggy in the morning so first, we saw nothing. Literately nothing! We were so disappointed because these cliffs are one of the most popular tourist destinations in Ireland and topped a list of attractions in many years. Around twelve the fog started to disappear and we could finally see the true face of the area.

2. Kilkenny

My favourite city after Galway. Kilkenny is a must. You have to visit the castle and the main street. There is a huge park after you step through the gates of the castle and also there is the Butler's mansion with a garden. Did I mention that Ireland has almost a thousand gardens? One or two must be on your list. They are like fairy trails.

3. Galway

You can only go there by car or arranged trip (maybe). We had a car so it wasn't too complicated. This is a huge geopark near to North Ireland and it is a long journey especially from the south, but definitely worth the suffering. There are around five parts of it at different locations. The biggest one

4. Prehistorical sights, Country Cavan

You can only go there by car or arranged bus. The geopark is near to North Ireland and it is a long journey especially from the south, but definitely worth the suffering. Neolithic Sites in Ireland are usually in the south, but this one is not.
