

Ciao Bella

I arrived to Milan on the 17th of February, one week before my orientation day at school and at the beginning of the Spring/Summer 2020 Fashion week. If you ever consider to study in Milan, I highly recommend to reserve your accommodation way before your arrival. Finding a room here seemed to be impossible- I have heard stories from students who were looking for homes for months. I had luck with finding mine in a Facebook group, but I did not sleep too much on my first week of arrival. However, after moving in I had a chance to explore this beautiful city. Of course, the first thing I had to do was visiting the Duomo - including the terrace which is on the must to do list once you are in Milan.

Finally, I can understand why people praise the architecture in Milan. I have never seen this much interesting structured building in one place.

The square in front of Duomo called Piazza del Duomo and it has such an amazing vibe. Music, clubs, restaurants, gelateria, cafe, shops...- these all can be found around there.

Besides visiting the Duomo, I also walked by the channel which became my favourite place by now – Navigli. Navigli is not just about cafeterias and restaurants for a good price, but student's life. We hang out there with my classmates before classes, between classes and well...after classes.

Also, during my first week, I really wanted to pull out one of my wishes from my bucket list: attending the Milan fashion week. Unfortunately, since you need an invitation for that, it remained a wish. However, we visited one of the locations where the GCDs fashion show took place and we had a chance to see a lot of celebrity -included one of the most famous Italian fashion influencer, Chiara Ferragni.
